I always mess this up.	I'm still learning, and I'm improving each time.
I am not made for this job.	I'm developing the skills needed for this role.
I have made a stupid mistake	I've identified an issue and I'm working on fixing it.
I don't have the resources.	I'll need additional resources or support to move this forward.
I am left out of the email thread. No one tells me anything.	I may be missing some context, could I be included in future updates?
This is too complicated.	This is complex, so I'll break it down step by step.
I don't have the expertise.	I don't have full expertise yet, but I can research or consult someone who does.
This is pushing the limits of my abilities.	This is a stretch assignment and a good opportunity to grow.
I have never done this before.	This is new to me, and I'm ready to learn how to do it.
Sorry I don't know!	I don't have that information yet, but I can find out.

As a freelancer, what would you say to a client in the below scenarios?

1.The client didn't send the request on time.

Thanks for sending the details. Since the request came in after the original deadline, the delivery timeline will need to shift. I can have this ready by tomorrow . Please let me know if that works for you.

2.The client sent incorrect information in the request

I noticed a few details in the request that don't seem to align with the original brief. Could you please confirm or clarify the correct information? Once I have that, I'll proceed right away.

3.The client is upset because of the delay.

I understand your concerns. The timeline shifted due to receiving key information later than planned. I'm currently working on this and will deliver by Sunday.
