I always mess this up.	Mistakes help me learn and improve.
I am not made for this job.	This job challenges me, and I'm building the skills to meet those challenges.
I have made a stupid mistake.	I'm human and I'm improving every day.
I don't have the resources.	I can find creative ways to work with what I have.
I am left out of the email thread. No one tells me anything.	I can communicate openly to ensure I'm included.
This is too complicated.	I can break this down into manageable steps.
I don't have the expertise.	This is an opportunity to expand my knowledge.
This is pushing the limits of my abilities.	I'm capable of more than I realize.
I have never done this before.	I'm stepping into new experiences.
Sorry I don't know!	I'm learning and will get the answer soon.

1. The client didn't send the request on time.

--> To ensure smooth progress, I suggest we set a deadline for each task. This will help us stay on schedule and avoid delays.

2. The client sent incorrect information in the request.

--> I noticed some of the information in the request doesn't match what's needed. Could you please clarify so I can proceed accurately?

3. The client is upset because of the delay.

--> I'm sorry for the delay. I'm taking steps to resolve this quickly and ensure it doesn't happen again.
