OPENING THE WORLD SINCE 1878

WARM-UP

“We are busy and can’t do anything about your delay.
Please wait until we respond. That’s how it is.”

WARM-UP

Our goal for today is to talk about crisis communication and how to handle it.

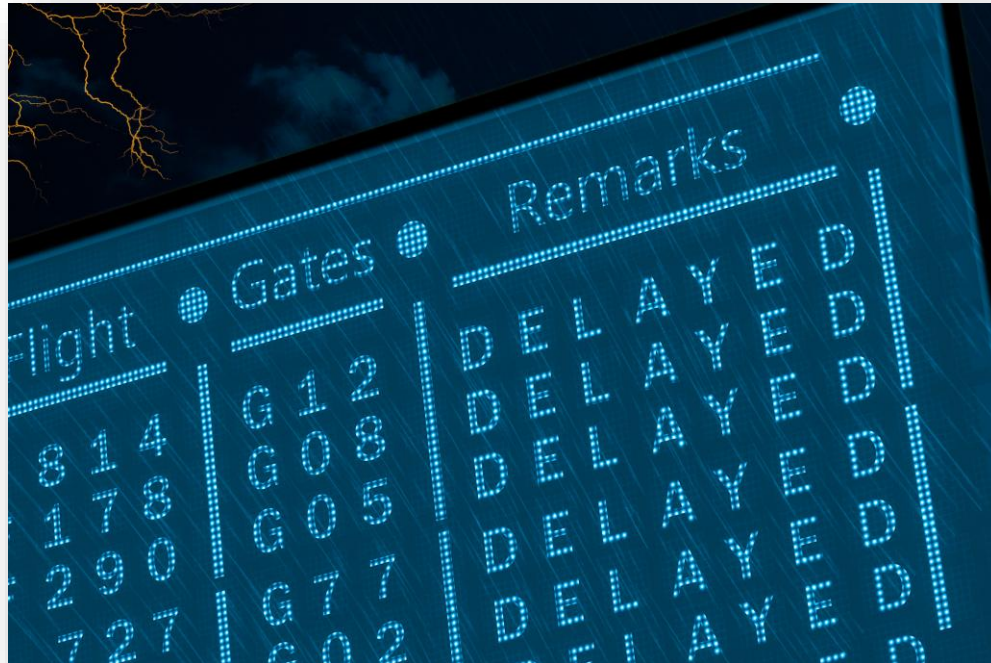

SECTION 1

Section 1: Vocabulary, Expressions, and Terms

Berlitz®

OPENING THE WORLD SINCE 1878

I'm worried about the project - there is a big delay and we need the files today.

I completely understand. First, let me offer an apology for the inconvenience.

I want to be transparent about what happened.
Our main software crashed yesterday.
We're working on resolving the problem.

I can offer a small compensation - a 10% discount on this project.

Model Reply

Subject: Update on Your Logo Files

Hello [Client Name],

I completely understand how stressful this must be, and I'm sorry for the delay. The final review took longer than expected because we wanted to ensure the colors were consistent across all formats. I will send the final files to you by 2 PM today. If you'd like, I can also send you a preview version within the next hour so your team can start preparing for the campaign.

Best regards,
[Your Name]

Client's Message

Hi, I was expecting the logo files yesterday but didn't receive them. We have a campaign starting tomorrow - this is urgent.

✗ Poor Reply 1 – Too Short

Hi,
Still working on it. You'll get it later.

✗ Poor Reply 3 – Unclear

Hi,
Sorry for the inconvenience. We are doing our best. It should be ready soon.

✗ Poor Reply 2 – Not helpful

Hi,
The delay isn't our fault — your team sent the feedback late last week. We can't speed up the process now.

Useful Expressions

- "We understand your frustration...",
- "Due to X...",
- "Here's what we can offer..."

OPENING THE WORLD SINCE 1878

Role Play: Respond to a client delay issue.

- Start with empathy – show you understand.
- Give a clear reason – short and professional.
- Offer a solution – include timelines or options.
- Keep tone calm and positive.
- Invite confirmation – end by asking client to agree.

Debates!

- When there is a crisis due to a mistake from the company, they should share the detailed truth with the client.
- Social media is the best way to communicate during a crisis.
- The company should apologize even if the situation is out of their control (example: a national holiday).
- A company should always offer a compensation even if they did nothing wrong.
- The client is always right.
